

Sign In or Sign Up

Like 358k

Membership Services Jobs Cars Real Estate Subscribe Rentals Classifieds Custom Publishing Place Ad

Los Angeles Times | TELEVISION

LOCAL U.S. WORLD BUSINESS SPORTS ENTERTAINMENT HEALTH LIVING TRAVEL OPINION DEALS

WEEKLY AD

BREAKING PHOTOS VIDEO CRIME OBITUARIES WEATHER TRAFFIC CROSSWORDS GAMES HOROSCOPES APPS

IN THE NEWS: MADONNA | BOB ROSS | MITT ROMNEY | GREEN DAY | 'WALKING DEAD' | 'SABADO GIGANTE' | TOM CRUISE

Search

SHOW TRACKER WHAT YOU'RE WATCHING

TV giant Don Francisco celebrates 50 years of 'Sabado Gigante'

An entertainment institution in the Spanish-speaking world, Don Francisco aims to stay on top of the game with his long-running variety show 'Sabado Gigante.'

Comments 3 Email Share 3 Tweet 204 Recommend 986

Connect f t +1

Recommended on Facebook Like 358k

Login You need to be logged into Facebook to see your friends' recommendations.

No recommendations for this website yet. Put some Like buttons on your website to engage your users. Details can be found here.

advertisement

Don Francisco has hosted the Spanish-language show (which translates to "Giant Saturday") since 1962. (Michael Robinson Chavez, Los Angeles Times / October 27, 2012)

Related photos »

Photos: A history of 'Sabado Gigante' guests: From Pele to Bill Gates

By Yvonne Villarreal, Los Angeles Times
October 27, 2012 | 5:00 a.m.

MIAMI — Don Francisco is running late to his own party — peculiar, considering he arrived six hours before it started.

One of Latin America's top entertainment personalities is holed up in his dressing room at Univision's studios as frenzied fans just outside line a red carpet where celebrities

Photos: Super storm Sandy lashes East Coast

Holland: Not all about bikes at 'Bicycle Bitchen'

Museum illuminates old-school Vegas | Photos

Apple ousts two top execs

No 'Frankenstorm' for CNN

Michelle Obama encourages early voting on 'Jimmy Kimmel Live'

Television review: 'Mockingbird Lane' an uneven monster mash-up are slowly making their way into the big show. As he quietly watches the procession on his dressing room monitor, his longtime assistant begins the intricate ritual of preparing his pre-show meal that includes branzini fish with rocoto chile paste and a tossed salad.

PHOTOS: 50 years of Sábado Gigante: From Pelé to Bill Gates

"After the break," announces one of the hosts from the red carpet, "Don Francisco!" The adoring throngs scream in delight as the ringmaster of the longest-running variety show in TV history squeezes a lemon over his salad and chuckles. After a half-century in show business, he knows they can wait a little longer.

At 71, Francisco is an institution in the Spanish-speaking world as the unmistakable and singular host of "Sábado Gigante," which means "Giant Saturday." The sturdy Chilean-born showman is the enduring attraction in a weekly three-hour cavalcade famous for its bikini-clad models, slapstick sketches and madcap contests, and which has become a welcome weekend siren call to the Latino diaspora.

"Sábado Gigante' is its own unique thing," said Chon Noriega, director of UCLA's Chicano Studies Research Center. "It's that little-bit-of-everything approach — the scantily clad girls, the circus acts ... when you come across it, you'd be surprised at how long you sit there watching it. I don't think some people would like to admit it or feel comfortable being entertained by it because it is sort of the lowest common denominator approach to entertainment."

Francisco's show, which combines the sensibilities of such English-speaking classics as "Benny Hill" and "The Carol Burnett Show" with a splash of "American Idol," lives up to its sizable name. It airs in more than 40 countries and boasts tens of millions of weekly viewers, including more than 2.2 million in the United States, most of them in Miami, New York and Los Angeles.

Like Francisco, the largely unchanging show has defied the capricious tastes of several generations and has proved indestructible to the competition for five decades. Saturday's four-hour special, which was taped Wednesday night, officially marks the show's golden anniversary.

"This is one of those feats that we will never see again in television history — never," said Cesar Conde, president of Univision.

The show's fame is hardly confined to Spanish-speaking audiences. Thanks to its incredible longevity, many English-speaking Americans have at least heard of the program, if not tuned in on occasion to see the wacky proceedings unfold. In perhaps one of the surest signs of modern American cool, Comedy Central's Stephen Colbert regularly parodies the Miami-based program by posing as Esteban Colberto, host of the Spanish-language newscast "Colberto Reporto Gigante."

While it's a required stopover for Latino celebrities promoting their projects, the show has also attracted an enviable list of English-speaking guests through the years including Jerry Lee Lewis, Tony Bennett, and Bill and Melinda Gates.

ENVELOPE: The awards insider

In recent years, its guests also routinely feature American politicians eager to reach out to the nation's fastest growing and increasingly influential minority. During the 2000 presidential campaign, Francisco interviewed George W. Bush at his Texas ranch as well as Democratic candidate Al Gore.

President Barack Obama, who sat down with Francisco in 2010, is slated once again to drop by the program before Election Day. (Republican candidate Mitt Romney has been invited on the show, but has not yet committed to an appearance.)

On a traditionally difficult night in American television, the show continues to register solid ratings and even has some traction with the younger demographic. Among adults 18- to 49-years-old, "Sábado Gigante" is usually in the top five nationwide for its time period regardless of language, and often ranks first in New York, Miami, San Francisco, Phoenix and Los Angeles.

over missteps

Ads by Google

MAGNOLIA 50% OFF
ANNIVERSARY SALE
 OCT 21 - NOV 3
INCREDIBLE DEALS
EXCEPTIONAL GEAR
TWO WEEKS ONLY
 LEARN MORE
 Santa Monica

Most Viewed Latest News

- Obama declares parts of New York, New Jersey major disaster areas 10/30/2012, 8:07 a.m.
- NYSE, Nasdaq preparing to reopen Wednesday 10/30/2012, 7:56 a.m.
- Report: Robert Pattinson new face of Dior men's fragrance 10/30/2012, 7:40 a.m.
- Super storm Sandy takes out several major websites; flooding cited 10/30/2012, 7:34 a.m.
- Tale of the tape: Google's Nexus 10 versus Apple's 9.7-inch iPad 10/30/2012, 7:34 a.m.

Videos

"Everyone wants to advertise on it. It's considered family-friendly," said Danielle Gonzales, managing director of the Chicago-based multicultural ad agency Tapestry. "It may not be the water cooler program, but it's tried and true. It's like a good pair of blue jeans."

Except for his fascination with Jack Paar, Art Linkletter and Ed Sullivan, Francisco might never have put on this particular pair of jeans. Francisco, born Mario Kreutzberger to Jewish parents in Chile, traveled to New York City decades ago at the direction of his father with the intention of studying fashion design. But that plan soon crumbled as Francisco fell in love with American television.

The 21-year-old soon returned to his native Chile just as television was developing and launched his own program on Canal 13 in 1962. The loud and flamboyant show, originally aired on Sundays as "Show Dominical," soon became a hit and moved to Saturday nights a year later and changed its name.

"Our program is a mixture — it's like a soup," said Francisco while walking the halls at the Univision complex, where the show has been shot since 1986. "We're a mix of different ingredients. We discuss a lot of issues important to the Latino community — immigration, health problems. It can't always be games."

PHOTOS: 50 years of Sábado Gigante: From Pelé to Bill Gates

And it might not always remain in the same comfortable but predictable format, says Francisco, who is calmer and more matter-of-fact than his clownish TV persona. He acknowledges to being consumed lately with keeping the show relevant, even stopping a young person in the studio halls to ask if they prefer three-minute or five-minute segments.

There's even talk of an English-language version. Francisco said they're in talks with a producer and in search of a host to make a pilot.

"That used to be the future," Francisco said, pointing to a nearby television. "But today, there are so many platforms that you really don't know what the future in television is — not in Spanish, not in English, not in any language."

But for now, on his way to the red carpet, he's focused on the night's grand performance — and getting a piece of lettuce off his face before facing the audience.

"In my soul, it doesn't feel like 50 years," Francisco said while adjusting the sleeves of his tuxedo jacket. "In my body, I can feel it. I don't have the elasticity that I had 50 years ago. But the show energizes me ... how could it not? We'll see if I say that in 2022 when we're celebrating again."

Man Escapes Horrendous Truck ...
KTLA - Los Angeles Oct 29, 2012

5

Follow @villarrealy Like 652 +1
yvonne.villarreal@latimes.com

PHOTOS, VIDEOS & MORE:

Timeline: Emmy winners through Celebrity meltdowns the years

EQUINOX
MORE TO LOVE
EQUINOX FITNESS CLUBS
COMING SOON TO ENCINO
GET ON THE LIST

the latest fall TV

Copyright © 2012, Los Angeles Times

Comments 3 Email Share 3 Tweet 204 Recommend 986

MORE FROM THE TIMES

- Stephen King gets kicked out of high school
- Zillow now lists homes in foreclosure
- Hurricane Sandy today, doomsday for America tomorrow?
- Burger King profit drops 83% in third quarter
- Hurricane Sandy: More than 225,000 lose power in Connecticut

FROM AROUND THE WEB

- 6 worst home fixes for the money / BankRate.com
- 13 Things a Movie Theater Employee Won't Tell You / Reader's Digest
- Sorry Fellas: Women Who Broke Hearts By Coming Out As Lesbians / Bossip
- The Eyeshadow Shade Everyone Is Wearing This Fall / Makeup.com
- President Obama Descends from America's First Slave / Ancestry.com

[what's this]

Ads by Google

BOSS Revolution

Como Lo Vio En Sabado Gigante: Primer Dollar Gratis, Llama Hoy www.BOSSRevolution.net

Fig at 7th - Downtown LA

Something Fig is happening. Outdoor Shopping Center debuting Fall 2012. Figat7th.com

Lakers Trade Rumors

Want the latest news, analysis, and videos? Get our free newsletter! BleacherReport.com/LA-Lakers

Comments (3)

Add / View comments | Discussion FAQ

don.danielson at 9:16 AM October 30, 2012

An institution. Glad to see he still has it. ¡Viva Francisco!

Jonas Castro at 3:40 PM October 27, 2012

The best show on latin TV

29aug1970 at 7:37 AM October 27, 2012

A silly, low-brow show.

Comments are filtered for language and registration is required. The Times makes no guarantee of comments' factual accuracy. Readers may report inappropriate comments by clicking the Report Abuse link next to a comment. Here are the full legal terms you agree to by using this comment form.

In Case You Missed It...

Lopez: Setting self-doubt aside to fix L.A. eyesore

Yunnan, China's hidden gem

Slideshow: David Horsey political cartoons

Farewell to Afghanistan, with sadness and affection

Photos: Celebrity portraits by The Times

Corrections

The Envelope

Media Kit

About Us

Contact Us

Site Map

Los Angeles Times

Burbank Leader | Coastline Pilot | Daily Pilot | Huntington Beach Independent | News Press | Pasadena Sun | Valley Sun | KTLA | Hoy
Baltimore Sun | Chicago Tribune | Daily Press | Hartford Courant | Los Angeles Times | Orlando Sentinel | Sun Sentinel | The Morning Call

Terms of Service | Privacy Policy | About Our Ads | Los Angeles Times, 202 West 1st Street, Los Angeles, California, 90012 | Copyright 2012

A Tribune Newspaper website