Lat/emo: A Symposium on Music, Markets, and Latinidad

Friday, May 31, 2013

12:00PM to 4:00PM

In Spring 2008, YouTube documented violent, physical attacks against "emo" youth in Mexican and Latin American metropolises. Journalists and media commentators around the globe wondered three things: how to define "emo," how to explain the presence of this youth subculture in Mexico and Latin America, and why did it elicit such a violent reaction?

This symposium explores these questions in the context of post-NAFTA angst and changes in latinidad, considering what emo is, how it travels, whether it means the same things in Mexico and the United States, and how music is marketed to U.S. Latin@ youth. Speakers include music journalist Nikki Darling, José "The Mexican Morrissey" Maldonado, and UCLA professors Marissa López and Miguel M. Unzueta.

This event is FREE. Advance registration required.
