'Home – So Different, So Appealing' to debut at LACMA

The Los Angeles County Museum of Art (LACMA) presents "Home – So Different, So Appealing: Art from the Americas since 1957" from June 11 to October 15.

"Boy in Suitcase" by Julio Cesar Morales will be among the artwork on display in the exhibit. (photo courtesy of the artist and Gallery Wendi Norris, San Francisco)

The exhibit features approximately 100 artworks by 40 Latino and Latin American artists. It explores the differences and affinities within artworks relative to immigration and political repression, dislocation and diaspora, and personal memory and utopian ideals.

Michael Govan, LACMA CEO and Wallis Annenberg director, said the museum is "thrilled" to begin the exhibit.

"The spirit of exchange is evident in the conception of this exhibition," he said. "Drawing from a range of artist voices, this exhibition offers a thought-provoking look into the ways in which Latino and Latin American artists have understood the idea of 'home' amid a changing political and [socio-economic] landscape."

Exhibition co-curators are Chon Noriega, Mari Carmen Ramirez and Pilar Tompkins Rivas.

LACMA is located at 5905 Wilshire Blvd. For information, visit lacma.org.
